Today, nearly every nation in the world belongs to the UN. In September 2000 members of the UN met to set the international agenda for the UN in the new century. The resulting Millennium Declaration sets out goals to be attained in seven key areas:
 - Peace, security and disarmament.
 - Development and poverty eradication.
 - Protecting our common environment.
 - Human rights, democracy and good governance.
 - Protecting the vulnerable.
 - Meeting the special needs of Africa
 - Strengthening the United Nations
- Functions:
 - Cooperating in this effort are more than 30 specialized agencies known collectively as the UN system. The UN and its family of organizations work together to promote respect for human rights, protect the environment, fight disease, and reduce poverty around the world.

IMF: International Monetary Fund

www.imf.org

- Mission:

- The IMF is a specialized agency of the United Nations system set up by treaty in 1945 to help promote the health of the world economy. The IMF is the principle forum for discussing not only national economic policies in a global context, but also issues important to the stability of the international monetary financial system. Its mission includes promoting the balanced expansion of world trade, the stability of exchange rates, the avoidance of competitive currency devaluations, and the orderly correction of a country's balance of payments problem.

- Functions:

- Monitors economic and financial developments and policies, in members' countries and at the global level, and gives policy advice to its members.
- Lends to member countries with balance of payments problems. This provides temporary financing, and supports adjustment and reform policies aimed at correcting the underlying problems.
- Provides the governments and central banks of its member countries with technical assistance and training in its areas of expertise.

WHO: World Health Organization

www.who.int

- Mission

- The World Health Organization coordinates programs aimed at solving health problems and the attainment by all people of the highest possible level of health.
